Justification of Requirements or Costs

The proposed rule changes will not increase or decrease the number of small businesses already affected by the current regulations. The proposed rules set the groundwork for outsourcing the licensing examination to a national provider, which will be of benefit to future applicants.

Consideration of Alternative Methods of Achieving the Purpose of the Proposed Rule

Since the rule provides no change in the amount of fees to be assessed funeral homes and funeral directors, with the exception of a reduction in the cost of applying for licensure by reciprocity and the possibility of an increase in the examination fee due to outsourcing the examination, the consideration of alternate compliance or reporting requirements or other operational standards was not appropriate. There are no new reporting or record keeping requirements for small businesses as a result of the proposed rule.

Explanation of Determination

The proposed rule does not amend the amount of the current fees assessed with the exception of a reduction in the cost of applying for licensure by reciprocity and the possibility of an increase in the examination fee due to outsourcing the examination. The proposed rules set the groundwork for outsourcing the licensing examination to a national provider, which will be of benefit to future applicants. The state would not realize an increase in revenue from the outsourcing of the examination as candidates will pay the examination vendor directly.

The operations of the funeral and cemetery service board are labor intensive with both inspections of facilities and cemeteries and the administration of examinations. Examinations are administered by staff approximately four times per year. The outsourcing the administration of the examinations will result in increased benefits including not only a savings of staff time, but also in the capability to provide applicants with the ability to take the examinations at sites located around the state with almost immediately availability of results. The time for obtaining license will be shortened. The board cannot implement these changes without amending its rules to allow for payment of examination fees directly to the examination provider. The outsourced examination will cost more than the $50 maximum fee allowable under the current rules. However, the increase will be more than offset by the convenience to applicants who will be able to take the exam in a location close to their home, thus saving on gasoline and hotel expenses for an overnight stay.
